

Talk to Your Banker

TIME was when men never seemed to think of consulting a banker unless they wanted to borrow money or were in financial difficulties of some kind. Nowadays, wide-awake business men drop in for an informal chat once in awhile.

A furniture man who only talks to other furniture men doesn't get a clear picture of general business conditions. Your banker talks to business men in many different lines. Often he knows something about the leather business or the silk business or the varnish business that the furniture man would be glad to know.

CATROW INDICTED IN BIG BOOZE PLOT

Former Dry Aid Accused of Signing Illegal Permits for 1,000 Cases.

FIVE OTHERS INVOLVED

All Deny Charges of Conspiracy in Withdrawal of $30,000 Whisky.

Col. Herbert G. Catrow of the National Republican Club and former Assistant Prohibition Director for the State of New York, indicted for conspiracy in the withdrawal of 1,000 cases of whisky for illegal purposes, pleaded not guilty yesterday before Judge Mack in the United States Court and was released in $5,000 bail.

Others named in the indictment are David F. McGowan, an advertising man; Samuel P. Stecker, proprietor of the Progressive Drug Company, at 1838 Park avenue; Frank Fallon, a member of the Elks; Benjamin Silver, Walter Ruby and the Hill & Hill Distilling Company, a Kentucky corporation which has offices at 49 West Twenty-ninth street, the building recently vacated by prohibition headquarters. All pleaded not guilty and each furnished $5,000 bail.

The indictment charges McGowan received $20,000 from Silver on December 27, 1921, which was not any part of the $30,000 purchase price paid the Hill & Hill Distilling Company. It is alleged that on the same day Col. Catrow verified permits taken to him on December 20 last by Stecker for his approval. There were four permits in all, calling for the release of 350 cases each.

The indictment goes on to say that 250 cases were delivered on December 27 to persons unknown to the Grand Jury and that on January 2 the other 750 cases were delivered to a truckman. The liquor, it is charged, was delivered finally to Emanuel Kessler and Morris Sweetwood, neither of whom was indicted.

Further the indictment charges that all the defendants from December 1 until January 5 conspired with firms and individuals unknown in the removal and sale of liquor other than for non-beverage purposes.

Nash Rockwood, counsel for Col. Catrow, issued the following statement: "Col. Catrow is absolutely innocent of any wrongdoing whatsoever. He saw the indictment to-day for the first time and says that with the exception of signing his official name to the withdrawal permits he had no further connection with the matter and that the facts of the withdrawal were well known to Federal Prohibition Director Ralph A. Day and at no time was there any secrecy about it."

ARRESTED IN FORGERY OF HIS FATHER'S NAME

Youth's Wife Says He's 'Crazy About High Living.'

Nathan Kramer, 19, of 561 West 141st street, was arrested yesterday in Atlantic City, charged with passing checks to which he had forged the name of his father, Max Kramer, who lives at the Hotel Astor.

Young Kramer lives at the 141st street apartment with his wife and their baby. He has been married two years. Mrs. Kramer said last night that her husband had no reason to forge his father's name, as the elder Kramer has always given his son as much money as he wanted.

"I can't explain it," said Mrs. Kramer last night, "except to say that my husband is crazy about money and high living."

Kramer reached Atlantic City a week ago with an imposing array of luggage. He ran up a bill of $211 at the Hotel Ambassador and also cashed two checks for $150 each signed with his father's name.

Wisconsin Supreme Court Prohibits Home Brew

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.

MILWAUKEE, April 11.—The State Supreme Court sounded the knell of Wisconsin's home brew industry when it ruled to-day that home brew cannot be manufactured even for personal consumption.

The court ordered Judge Alfred Jenks of Iowa county to decide the case of the State Prohibition Commission against Curtis Nelson in favor of the State. Nelson had forty gallons of home brew in his house. He admitted manufacturing it, but explained it was for his own use. Judge Jenks said there was doubt whether the State prohibition law included the "manufacture" only of home brew, and certified the case to the Supreme Court for instruction.

MAJOR DURYEA'S SUICIDE MYSTERY

Shoots Himself in Quarters in Presidio and Army Board Finds No Motive.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 11.—An army board of inquiry into the death of Major Frank W. Duryea, in his quarters to-day, found that he had committed suicide, by shooting, but learned nothing of any motive.

Major Duryea was the nephew of the late Gen. Duryea, a civil war veteran and a member of a family owning the Duryea Starch Manufacturing Company in New York city.

His widow lives in New York city, and he has a son, Wright Duryea, in business in New York. Major Duryea was an overseas veteran.

Major Duryea was in the Finance Department and his commanding officer, Col. Edward P. Orton, said there were no irregularities in his accounts or any other apparent causes for his act. He lived at the Presidio with Major John M. True.

Tragedy Linked With Name.

Mrs. Frank W. Duryea, who, with her son, Wright Duryea, lives in an apartment house at 145 West Twelfth street, said yesterday that both she and the son had heard from Major Duryea recently and knew of no reason for his suicide.

Major Duryea's uncle, Gen. Hiram Duryea, was shot and killed by his eldest son, Chester B. Duryea, on May 5, 1914.

Major Duryea was a first cousin of Harry H. Duryea, who was found dead in his office at 347 Madison avenue on July 28, 1921, with a revolver by his side, and of Walter E. Duryea, who broke his neck by diving into shallow water at Glen Cove in 1909.

Major Duryea was born in Glen Cove forty-nine years ago. After leaving West Point, where he was in the class of 1896, he joined his relatives in the starch business, but left it to form the Stock Exchange house of Duryea & Co. He was a member of the New York Yacht and Calumet clubs. He withdrew from the Stock Exchange in 1907 and his firm was reorganized as Duryea, Tappin & Co. He made a satisfactory settlement with his creditors and was re-admitted to the exchange in 1908, later selling his seat.

When the United States entered the world war Major Duryea was made a Captain in the Officers Reserve Corps, was stationed in Paris and later was promoted to a Major and transferred to the finance department of the army. He was sent to the Presidio at San Francisco last July. His son, Wright, now in business here, became a Lieutenant and lost a leg in the Argonne. Major Duryea was notified recently that he would be promoted soon to be Lieutenant-Colonel.

Mrs. Frank Duryea was formerly Miss Grace Wolcott of Dedham, Mass.
